YEAR OF INDIGENOUS LANGUAGES FILM FEST 2019

Embrace of the Serpent - Colombia - 2015 (125m) Supported by HAL Distribution With Thai and English subtitles

The film tells two stories thirty years apart, both featuring Karamakate, an Amazonian shaman and last survivor of his tribe. He travels with two scientists, firstly with the German Theo von Martius in 1909 and then with an American named Evan in 1940, to look for the rare yakruna, a sacred plant. Language: Cubeo, Huitoto, Ticuna, and Wanano spoken by 6.3, 8, 47, and 2.6 thousand 👤👤

Coffee - Chants of Smoke - Mexico - 2014 (80m) Presented by the Embassy of Mexico with English subtitles

This hybrid film mixes fiction and documentary to portray the traditions, values, and customs of Jorge, a Law student and his family, in the village of San Miguel Tzinacapan (a Nahuatl zone), following the death of its patriarch. As the family prepares to honor the deceased member, they face an increasingly hard financial and cultural situation. Language: Nahuatl spoken by 1.7 million 👤👤

Los ojos del camino - Peru - 2017 (88m) Presented by the Embassy of Peru with English subtitles

A visual poem with overwhelming images of the Andean mountains about a spiritual master of the Andean tradition who emerges in different regions of the Cordilleras and disappears again, like a ghost who wants to take one last look at the sacred mountains, and he converses with the water, the rocks, the men, and finds out under what disease the human race of the present suffers. Language: Quechua spoken by 8-10 million 👤👤
